Data-Driven Interventions: Implementing A Peer Coaching Model To Improve Retention
Friday, April 26 ~ 1:00-2:00pm (Eastern)

Once the live date has passed, this training will be available on demand.

Overview

Grounded in transition theory, sense of belonging concepts, and population health management practices, peer-to-peer interventions are paving the way to increase student retention rates. This presentation offers an emerging best practice for leveraging peer leaders and predictive analytics to drive retention efforts aimed at easing the effects of student transition. Discover how one institution's use of institutional data led to the development of a peer coaching initiative, the implementation of the peer coaching initiative, and lessons we are still learning as we continue to enhance the initiative.

Objectives:

- Describe how a year-round, peer intervention model can support university's retention and persistence initiatives.
- Learn how case management can be applied in an orientation/transition/retention focused unit
- Increase their knowledge of possible predictive analytic mechanisms to implement on their campus
- Generate an idea on how to leverage peer leaders for student success efforts

Who Should Attend?

- Administration
- Enrollment Management
- Student Services/Affairs
- Student Success
- Any educator interested in learning more about peer-to-peer interventions
